What The Edge is currently doing:

Eventbrite / EBMS / Survey Monkey

- Eventbrite is sign up to a workshop and gathering personal details
- EBMS is booking the edge and using other resources
- Survey Monkey is follow up on participation in workshops and is anonymous.

80% of the programming done at The Edge is around workshops in the dml- coming in and learning a skill.

Participants are not necessarily coming as they already feel or want to feel a part of a community. However, they are accessing resources, building ideas (2 of the 4 that the edge is targeting)

Can OLA be a program that trials a new way?

Should we therefore trial a new way? Asking the questions we want (give choice for anonymity) pre and post both done through eventbrite? Find a way to then manually enter them after this.

Then we can reassess at the end of the process. For a way to move forward.

This would mean:

Eventbrite / EBMS

Then manually adding all the information somewhere
