FEAR OF THE SMALL SCREEN

INCLUDED IN THIS WORKSHOP PLAN

- > Materials and equipment list
- > Preparation suggestions
- > Recommendations: General advice, post workshop suggestions and opportunities for further learning
- > Full 45 minute workshop outline

APPENDIX

- > Phobias list
- > Shot type cheat sheet
- > Sample horror film trailers

MATERIALS AND EQUIPMENT

- Laptop and projector (or large screen)
- Whiteboard or butchers paper block with appropriate markers
- Post-it notes (1 pad per group) and pens
- A3 paper (3 sheets per participant)
- Smart device* with video capture capability
- Computers (for video editing)
- Assortment of suitable props eg plastic snakes and spiders, scary masks, costume elements
- Phobias list (attached)
- Shot type cheat sheet (attached)
- Selection of suitable horror film trailers (attached)

*Smart devices suitable for this workshop include ipad, mobile phone, flip camera, digital video camera or still camera with video capability

PREPARATION

In preparing for this workshop the facilitator should:

- > Make themselves familiar with the video editing program participants will be using to make their trailers. Keep in mind that video editing is not the main focus of the workshop. The aim is to create a very short horror film trailer - only very basic editing is required.
- > Know the devices that will be used for capturing video and how they work with the computers, including where the video files can be found on the device.
- > Be proficient in the process of getting footage off the devices and onto the computers.

RECOMMENDATIONS

GENERAL ADVICE

Prior to the arrival of participants:

- > Keep the pace way up. Think of the workshop as 'fast and furious film making'. Communicate this in both word and action (body language). The point of the workshop is not to create a masterpiece, it is to create something fun and creative in forty-five (45) minutes. Keeping participants moving and a little off balance is a good thing. Thinking too deeply about what they're doing may lead to overly complicated projects which they won't finish.

- > Each trailer should be shot on a single device. Having multiple devices will slow the process down and complicate the edit.
- > If you are using an iDevice with iMovie installed, it is possible to complete the entire project (filming and editing) in the device, there is even a trailer template in iMovie.
- > Try not to pre-empt outcomes by showing participants how you would complete the task. Instead, show copies of trailers made in previous workshops, or inspire them with real world examples of horror film trailers.
- > If possible, take personalities and skill levels into consideration when forming the small groups. It could be helpful to distribute more experienced participants across the various teams rather than grouping them together.

POST WORKSHOP

Prior to the arrival of participants:

- > Don't underestimate the value of participants being able to 'take home' their product. If you have the budget for it giving them each a USB with their trailer on it is ideal. Alternatively, you could upload the finished files to a cloud storage site like Dropbox and email them the link, or if you have the correct permissions upload to them to an online video sharing site like Youtube.
- > If you have the correct permissions, promote the videos through organisational social media.
- > Be sure to credit anyone involved when sharing or showcasing their work.

FURTHER LEARNING

This workshop can be expanded to any length required. The premise can be used for short film making, with segments such as storyboarding, filming and editing extended to meeting learning needs.

WORKSHOP OUTLINE

00:00

INTRODUCTION

Welcome participants to the workshop.

Introduce yourself.

Share any relevant health and safety information such as the location of toilets, emergency exits and procedures to be followed.

Ask participants to share their names and previous film making experience (ask them to keep it short).

Explain to participants that they will be making a horror film trailer.

Show them examples of horror film trailers.

Discuss what makes a horror film:

- > What scares you?
- > What scares other people?

Distribute PHOBIAS LIST as a conversational starting point. Alternatively have participants 'google' phobias and/or brainstorm ones they've heard of as well as made up ones.

00:05

BRAINSTORMING AND FILM MAKING BASICS

Discuss possible ideas for horror film trailers they might make. List all ideas on the whiteboard or butchers paper. No idea at this point is a bad idea. Write until there are no more suggestions or the moment before it falls into silliness.

Discuss what the assets they have access to for their trailers:

- > Props
- > Locations
- > Actors

Step them through using their devices for film making. Key points to make:

- > Use two hands when shooting; it will make you shot steadier
- > Prop the camera on a surface wherever you can
- > The sound into the device will be ordinary; consider making your trailer silent
- > Film, review, if it is good enough; move on, there's isn't time to be picky!
- > Long shot
- > Mid shot
- > Close shot
- > Establishing shot
- > Pan left, pan right, god shot etc

Draw participants' attention to SHOT TYPE CHEAT SHEET on back of phobias list

Encourage participants to work in groups - pairs, threes or fours are fine. Each group will need their own device and own computer for editing, so factor this into group size.

Have each group select a topic.

Set an artificial limit of five shots per trailer. They will exceed this, probably by three shots which should still be achievable within the timeframe.

Provide each group with a pad of PostIt notes and pens. Get them to storyboard out their idea on the PostIt notes, one shot per PostIt. They cannot shoot until they have storyboarded. Have them draw in a small check box at the bottom of each PostIt note.

Stick the PostIt notes (in story order) onto a sheet of A3 paper (landscape orientation is best). Get the participants to write the title of their film and names on the sheet of paper. Get them to include any description, dialogue, SFX (sound effects) etc beside or below the relevant PostIt.

This is their shot list and script.

00:15

SHOOTING

The participants have ten minutes to shoot their trailers. This is a hard limit, otherwise they will not have time to cut and output their trailers before the 45 minutes is up.

Suggest that participants film their shots in storyboard order. This will make editing easier. Remind them to check the box at the bottom of each PostIt note when they have finished capturing the shot.

00:25

CUTTING

Participants have 15 minutes to edit their trailers. This is a hard limit as they will need the last five minutes to export and 'show and tell' their movies.

Introduce the video editing program and (quickly) run the participants through cutting and moving files. Introduce them to titling and transitions.

Let participants work at their own pace and if they are going well add levels of complexity such as sound effects, slow motion and colour alterations. Give ten, five and three minute warnings to keep the pressure on making fast decisions. Remind participants at these times that it doesn't have to be perfect, that they have their whole lives to perfect film making if that is what they want; it just has to be done. Call tools down.

00:40

OUTPUTTING

Step participants through outputting their films to a USB.

Present each film to the rest of the group and applaud.

If providing take home copies on USB, duplicate and distribute otherwise provide participants with information on how to access their trailer and let them know when it will be made available - this should be as soon after the workshop as possible, preferably within hours of participants leaving.
